

I have acquired several skills during my time spent on building this portfolio. While many of these are technical in nature, I have also acquired several soft skills that would be useful in any occupation. Some of the most important of these include time management thanks to the constant pressure of weekly assignments and debugging/general problem solving. When I was working with the various new techniques and libraries, I would often encounter problems that I had to debug or search the documentation to fix.